1983 ... Students crunched through maple leaves, slid over icy sidewalks and rode on bicycles to the never-ending pressure of college classes. Faculty and staff continued the yearly cycle of recruitment, admission, teaching, maintenance and graduation. At first glance, 1983 looked much like other recent years at Goshen College.

Though its definition remained the same — "a small, Christian liberal arts college located in Goshen, Indiana" — Goshen College adapted to the unfolding present for a year marked with such changes as a dorm closing, a newly-active disarmament group and a grant for a new computer system. These are a few of the highlights which characterized 1983 as a year of subtle change.

Declining enrollment forced the closing of High Park dorm in an effort to use space more efficiently. The empty rooms and halls were transformed by plans to convert High Park into a bookstore and computer facility. Funds from a Title III grant covered the purchase of new computer equipment, leaving the college with more funds for structural renovation aided by a Lilly grant. With the computer center on first floor and the bookstore on second, the top two floors became available for departments needing room to expand. Social work, sociology and communication were among those considered.

Renovation work began early in May to create space for the two VAX 11/750 computers scheduled to arrive in mid-July. The new computers will provide approximately twice the computing power of the college's current model, while occupying less space, said Computer Services Director Ed C. Epp.

Students and alumni associate the Union with yogurt and bagels between classes, glaring fluorescent lights, empty mailboxes, the Opinion Board — a place to meet and discuss everything from Reaganomics to

Mary Oyer's latest lecture. This year video games, a pool table and MTV (MusicTelevision) changed the familiar atmosphere of the Snackshop. Some questioned MTV's compatibility with the Standards; others questioned the college's right to regulate what students watch and listen to, raising the issue of censorship.

The computer age hit yet another facet of campus life this year. With the new Rolm Cbx telephone system, "campus communicator" came to mean more than black, white and red sheets posted on bulletin boards and strewn on snack shop tables. The new system allowed callers such options as 'camping-on,' 'call-forwarding,' and 'transferring,' easing communication from off-campus as well as among campus locations.

When a phone call wasn't enough, any corner with a couple of chairs provided a place for friendly conversation. The latest campus events and ideas were covered in the weekly Record or on the Union opinion board.

About one hundred Yoder dorm residents turned the College Cabin shore into a sand beach for a Hawaiian beach party Oct. 2. A student's father donated several truckloads of sand to make the transformation realistic. Resident Director Dave Klahre (right) donned a grass skirt and joined the festivities, which included Frisbee, volleyball, Hawaiian music and a pig roast. Below, Jerrell Richer and Shelly Mann dream of summer while relaxing on the sand.

Women's Emphasis Week, Sept. 27-Oct. 2 featured the theme "A Celebration of Sisterhood." Throughout the week, speakers, films, music and drama gave both men and women the chance to explore different aspects of women's experience. The week culminated Saturday night with a Chocolate House featuring the words and music of campus women. At right, Dorothy Yoder Nyce leads a workshop on women and religion.

Julie Froese, Laurie Oswald and Wilma Harder perform at one of several coffeehouses held throughout the year. The coffeehouses featured music and poetry written and performed by students.

Charles Peachey, Ed Sprunger, Ed Miller and Graham Shantz bop along to "Barb'ra Ann" at the annual Freshman Kickoff Program on Sept. 10, held on the Umble Center Lawn.

On March 11, Carnival XI brought students and community together for a fun-filled evening in the Union gym. Student-sponsored food and game booths brought in $1000 for La Casa, a Goshen-area relief center. Carnival-goers had the chance to carve clay MX missiles into useful objects at Action for Disarmament's booth. Or they could refresh themselves with a Coke at the "Nerd" booth. A talent show and late-night breakfast ended the festivities.

Lisa Sommers joins an exhibit during the Mennonite Historical Library Open House Jan. 19. People attending the open house viewed some of the museum pieces stored in the MHL, one of the largest existing collections of books and other materials by and about Mennonites. MHL director John Oyer and other MHL staff led tours of the facility, which includes a rare book collection (such as a 1564 Ausbund) and the Hartzler Music Collection. Over 400 people attended the day-long open house.

Serious issues concerning peace and justice confronted the campus this year, drawing responses from groups and individuals. In early November Dr. Helen Caldicott, president of Physicians for Social Responsibility, presented a talk on the nuclear arms race and its impact on humans, ending with a question-answer session cut prematurely short by vocal opponents of Caldicott's message.

In response to her talk, Action for Disarmament, an ad hoc student group, formed to discuss issues and implement change. One of their projects, the bi-weekly newsletter Chain Reaction, had a circulation of nearly 200 copies.

On Monday, Oct. 4, Mark Schmucker was convicted of failure to register for the draft, and sentenced to two years voluntary service at Emmaus Home in Marthasville, Mo., and a $4000 fine.

At a small college, students have ample opportunity to take positions of leadership. Residence halls are staffed by teams of resident assistants and freshman counselors. (above). Saga Foods employs student managers to supplement their regular staff. Music students teach violin to children in the growing Suzuki instruction program and lead singing at chapels and hymnsings. Others take responsibility for fourth-hour Arts projects in voice, piano, dance and poetry.

Senior Joan Gotwals took a part-time position in the Student Development Division, filling in for Dwain Hartzler as Director of Student Activities for the winter tri during Hartzler's academic leave. Other students served as assistants in various departments, leading labs, grading essays, tests and inductives, sometimes even teaching classes.

Without student involvement, most organizations at GC would not be able to function. Students take leadership roles, leaving faculty sponsors with minimal responsibility.

The Student Central Committee (SCC), composed of students from different campus committees and headed by a five-person executive committee, works for student interests across campus. The Campus Activities Council is responsible for planning things to keep students busy in their off hours. Groups organize around ethnic identity or interests to serve student needs.

ACADEMICS

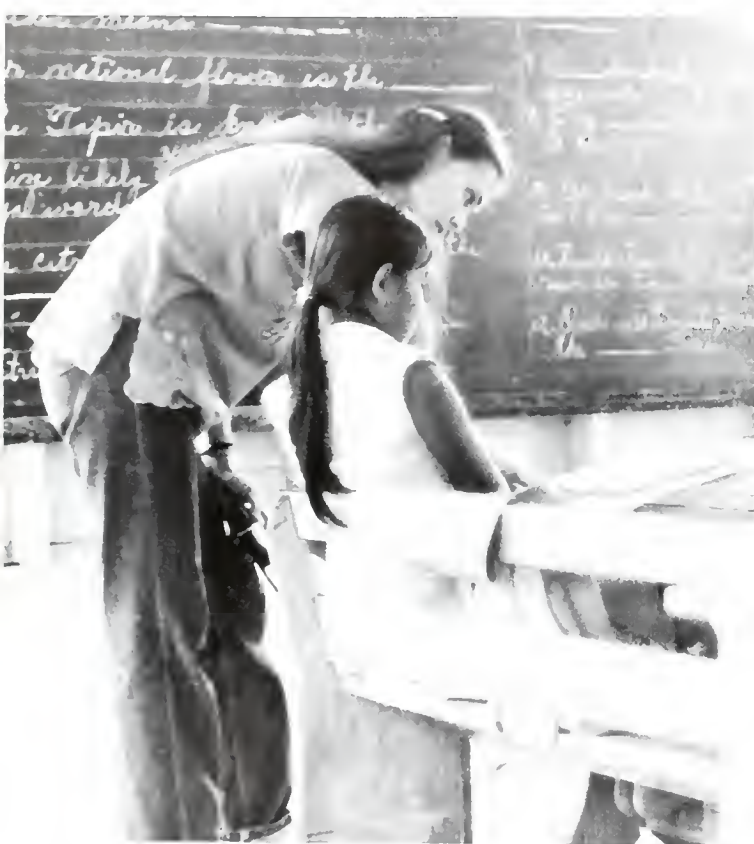

SST assignments transported students to Belize, Costa Rica, Haiti, Honduras and China this year. Fourteen weeks of intensive language and culture study supplemented the more demanding, rewarding task of living within a different culture. After seven weeks together in the capital cities, students in Central America and Haiti separated to pursue different field placements, many times out of reach of electrical wires and every-other-day letters.

China SSTers experienced a different type of SST. They lived together on the campus of Sichuan Provincial Teachers' College and taught English classes from beginning to advanced students.

The excitement of a Greyhound bus pulling into the circle south of the Union mixed with confusion as students attempted to sort out the multitude of impressions gleaned from fourteen weeks in a different country. Learning to overcome the language barrier, eating unfamiliar food, communicating with a new "family," and living in a strange city challenged students to examine their own cultural backgrounds more closely. Accepting the differences became one of the most important things an SSTer learned, often the hard way.

Students in Haiti were given the option of studying either French or Creole after extended debate among language professors, former Haiti SSTers and Haitian students on campus.

Students reach beyond textbooks

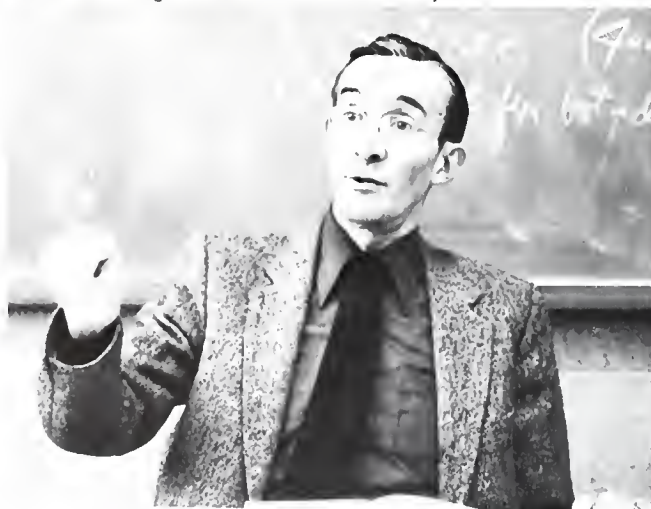

A glimpse at GC academics reveals much more than studying texts and absorbing lecture materials. Learning means arguing a point with the professor or helping grade exams as her student assistant. It means complaining to a classmate about February burnout, or mixing up chemicals as a G. Chem. lab assistant. It means opportunity to push out the traditional walls of the classroom to practice and hands-on experience.

This year the music department combined theory with performance. Musicians mixed the Messiah and The Magic Flute with Music History and Brass Methods. Art students studied the History of Art with field trips to the Chicago Art Institute returning to studio classes from Drawing I to the ceramics technique of raku. Seniors hung shows in the campus gallery after viewing shows by GC alumnus Stanley Kaufman and department chair Abner Hershberger earlier in the year.

Communication and education students applied learning on campus and off; first-year Communication Professor Lauren Friesen took students to the Berea College, Ky., Peace Play Festival while broadcast students comprised an increased number of WGCS engineers. Education students did field work and student taught in area schools, and hosted "Growing in Peace," the third annual Early Childhood Education Conference.

Two new instructors, Irene Gross and Judith Davis, provided the foreign language department with new perspectives. German students sharpened their skills in preparation for German SST in the spring. Students in the English department looked up from their books long enough to swap urban legends with S.A. Yoder lecturer Jan Brunvand and produce Shakespeare's Much Ado About Nothing on the Umble Center stage.

New professors supplemented the faculty in several departments. Tom Myers joined the sociology/social work faculty to replace Ron Stutzman, who received a grant to study SST's impact on host countries. Ted Koontz, Ph.D. candidate at Harvard, taught classes in political science, while Victor Koop joined the psychology department. In the religion/philosophy department, Ed Laarman replaced J.R. Burkholder, on sabbatical leave in Dallas. Business and accounting students took classes from Janet Foreman, who came to GC from Grace College.

President Burkholder left his desk for the podium to teach Problems in Philosophy; John Driver, Mennonite historian, offered a class in Hispanic Mennonite History.

Social work students went out into the Goshen community for practical experience in dealing with social problems. Practicums at Goshen General Hospital, mayor Max Chiddister's office, and Goshen area businesses broadened the perspectives of business/economics seniors. History majors used extensive resources at the Mennonite Historical Library in an attempt to better understand their heritage. Psychology students put research methods into practice, studying altruism among GC students.

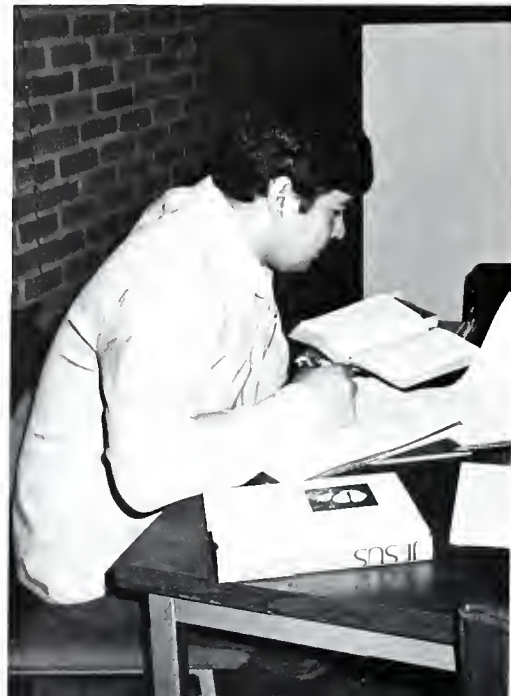

The Urban and Black Ministries department produced its first two graduates, Lee Lowery and Marvin Wright. Community persons, students and faculty alike attended Sunday evening services sponsored by Hispanic Ministries.

Students discovered that learning in groups can be fun. Sports skills electives from archery to aerobics, from swimming to yoga, encouraged personal fitness as well as group participation. Biology, chemistry, physics, home economics and computer labs united students with common interests and academic goals. Math students wrestled with calculus problems over bagels and coffee in the Snackshop. Nursing students practiced blood pressure and injection techniques on each other before venturing out into public health settings. Home economics students encountered more than cooking and sewing, embarking on projects in nutrition, child development and textile design. Over 100 students learned the ins and outs of computer programming and information science.

An $80,000 gift of waterfront land in Florida enabled the marine biology program to build its own facility for spring term study. Expansion of GC's computer system received a boost from a large Title III grant. Part of the funds were set aside to develop the new computer science major; the science department planned to incorporate computer instruction into biology courses and upper level research.

Junior nursing students followed a "case-load mother" through pregnancy to delivery. Nursing practicums went beyond hospital halls, involving student nurses in community health care.

Every spring a group of GC students spends a term in the Florida Keys as part of GC's Marine Biology program. From catching sharks to cooking meals, from patrolling a site of shoreline to snorkelling in deeper water — the two-and-a-half weeks on site are full of activity. Because students work for four credit hours, the work day often doesn't end until 10 or 11 p.m.

This year, Marine Biology students stayed in motel rooms or efficiencies at Lime Tree Bay Resort, not far from the work sites. A gift of land in 1982 enabled the college to consider building its own facility near Layton on Long Key.

Not only science majors participate in Marine Biology this year's group included political science, English, art, business and elementary education majors as well.

Professors of Biology Frank Bishop and Jonathan Roth accompany the student groups to Florida. The Marine Biology program is now in its 18th year, and is one of the more popular options GC offers during the Spring.

The Art Gallery in the Good Library basement offered art students a chance to display their creative works for the rest of campus to enjoy and appreciate. Several guest artists also displayed their work in the gallery. Twelve seniors held a series of three group shows prior to graduation; in one of these shows, the removal of a controversial painting sparked discussion of the validity of censorship.

Through Pinchpenny Press and Broadside, student writers had the chance to see their poetry and prose through the production process, also handled by students. Moss Lotus, a book of poems by Julia Spicher with artwork by Sue Lee, was the only Pinchpenny release this year; campus poets produced seven one-page Broadside.

Musicians flourish on campus

Musicians filled every available performance hall on campus with recitals, concerts and workshops. The Chamber Choir, under Mary Oyer's direction, joined with Amos Burkholder's Chorals, a chamber orchestra, and faculty soloists for a Christmas performance of Handel's Messiah. The department celebrated Brahms' centennial year with piano, choral and orchestral performances.

The music, drama and art departments pooled their talents for a February production of Mozart's opera The Magic Flute. Students took major character roles, with the support of an opera chorus and pit orchestra directed by Lon Sherer. Lauren Friesen's set design and Kay Montgomery's dramatic and musical interpretation contributed to four magical performance nights.

SPORTS

Tennis teams exploit talent

A young women's tennis team surprised many of its opponents this year with its play and poise, according to coach Ruth Gunden. Freshmen held five of the six singles positions, including the number one and two spots.

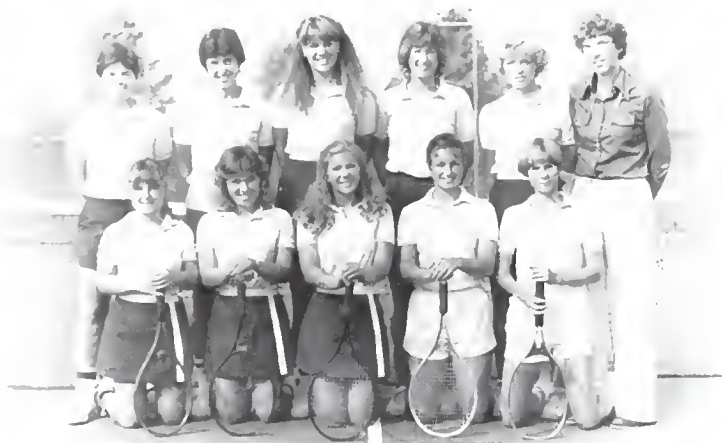

Overall, the team finished with a six win, three loss record. Individually, freshman Sally Hunsberger and senior Julie Mellinger played outstanding seasons, with 8-4 and 6-2 records respectively. The doubles team of Hunsberger and freshman Susan Yoder, with a 9-1 record, advanced to the finals of the NAIA District 21 tournament in October.

The men's tennis team, coached by Harold Yoder, dropped only one loss this season, chalking up eleven wins and finishing second in both the Mid-Central Conference and NAIA District 21.

The doubles team of senior Steve Yoder and sophomore Jeff Stoltzfus won the District 21 doubles championship in Indianapolis, capping off a 15-2 duo record. They advanced to Nationals play in Kansas City, Mo.

Yoder, sophomore Dave Conrad, junior Jay Ingold and junior Gareth Nissley won their respective flights in the MCC Conference meet in late October. Ten of this year's players will be eligible to return next year, promising yet another strong season.

Leafs play 'aesthetic, soccer'

Despite a disappointing first-round NAIA District 21 tournament loss to Grace, the soccer team played a strong season and ended with a 9-4-2 record. All four losses were one-goal losses; defensively, the team proved a formidable opponent, exemplified in its 5-0 exhibition win over Purdue University.

Assistant Coach Larry Gingrich complimented the team for its confidence and for its ability to play "aesthetic total soccer." According to Gingrich, only the team's inability to score goals at crucial times kept it from realizing its full national NAIA potential.

Netters show team spirit

With only five of thirteen members returning from last year, the women's volleyball team developed into a strong, unified group by the end of the season, finishing with a 22-6 record. The team notched up two wins and two losses in post-season NAIA tournament action, falling to a strong Franklin team in the semi-finals in early November.

Sophomore Cindy Beckler was named to the NAIA District 21 team, junior Anne Breckbill to the second team. Senior co-captains Laurie Bertsche and Betty Stauffer contributed strong support and high-percentage play to the team.

Coach Sue Roth praised the players' unity and team spirit, as well as crowd support on the few occasions that the Leafs played at home.

The eight-member cross country team finished its 1982 season with a dual-meet record of 1-3. The runners, led by sophomore captain Marty Gingerich, placed third in the Mid-Central Conference meet at Goshen's Ox-Bow Park in early November.

Gingerich, a sixth-place finisher in the MCC meet with a time of 28:15, was selected to the All-MCC team. In addition, strong performances by the team's four freshmen highlighted the season for coach John Ingold.

Ingold cited inexperience as the team's major problem this year, and anticipates a strong, competitive 1983 season.

The baseball team again fought the GC spring calendar, playing four double-headers per week with adverse weather conditions between reading days and first spring term.

Coach Harold Yoder commented that "the trimester calendar at Goshen has always played havoc with spring sports." Despite a heavy schedule, the team finished 8-15, placing fourth in their conference.

Freshman Doug Gerber was the bright spot in the season leading the team in hitting with a .368 average. Yoder complimented the team for their morale at the end of the season. "I think it contributed to winning three out of the last four games," he said.

According to coach Linda Shetler, this year's field hockey team gained a new respect from the rest of the campus for its strong team play and winning 8-4-1 season. The team advanced to the semifinals of the NAIA District 21 tournament, falling to Franklin.

Senior Heidi Baer, a four-year team veteran, led the team in goals scored, followed by junior co-captain Cheryl Detweiler. Defensively, senior co-captain Beth Bowman led the Leafs, assisted by senior Kathi Toelke and a strong supporting team. Baer and freshman Linda Burkhart were selected to the all-district team.

Coach Shetler noted the combination of experienced freshmen and veteran players as important in establishing the team's strength.

Team goes to semi-finals

The women's basketball team finished the year with a disappointing 5-13 record. Players felt by the end of the season that they had not played up to their full potential, but also that their record did not accurately reflect the team's skill.

Several outstanding freshmen put in impressive statistics for the season. Brenda Ervin averaged 17.1 points per game, with Deana Moren following closely with 13.1 points. Defensively, Whitney Gingerich and Jonell Kolb grabbed an average of 7.5 and 7.2 rebounds per game, respectively. In addition, Ervin received an honorable mention from the All-MCC coaches' vote at the end of the season.

The team played with a strong defense and a fast break that caught many opponents off guard, according to coach Linda Shetler. The team as a whole shot 63% from the free throw line, and 42% from the floor. Senior co-captain Beth Oswald and juniors Anne Breckbill and co-captain Lois Stoltzfus added depth and experience to a predominantly freshman team. The team faced the challenge of playing consistently with eight of its eleven players lacking previous college experience.

With only one graduating senior, Shetler said she anticipates an even stronger season next year. She commended the team for its enthusiasm, both on the floor and from the bench.

Inexperience and lack of height frustrated the men's basketball team this year, as they ended the season in mid-February with a record of four wins, eighteen losses. First-year Coach Ed Gore commended the young team for its intensity and its unwillingness to give up under pressure. According to Gore, the team's win-loss record did not accurately reflect its improvement from the beginning to the end of the season.

A high point of the Leafs' season was the overtime win at St. Francis Feb. 16. Earlier in the year the Leafs came within five points of breaking Bethel (Mishawaka) College's home win streak, dropping the match 60-65.

Kevin Miller

Pat Vendrely

Sophomore Kevin "Scoop" Miller finished the season with an average of 19.4 points per game and 79% at the free throw line; he was named to the All-MCC second team. Senior Scot Yoder led the Leafs in field goals with 47% shooting from the floor, and in rebounds with 140 for the season. Junior Eric Christner contributed 40% shooting and 115 rebounds to the team effort, while senior Phil Leichty's 87 rebounds bolstered the team's defense. As a whole, the team shot 39% in field goals, with a 60% free throw mark.

Gore is optimistic for the future of the GC basketball program, and appreciates the effort of this year's team to keep the program from "fizzling out."

The nine-man golf team finished its spring season in May with a 14-6 record in conference play, and a second-place conference standing. Despite a cool, rainy spring, coach John Ingold's team played consistently close to its potential. As the team's leading scorer, junior Jay Ingold finished sixth in the conference with an average score of 80.8. Senior co-captains Brent Miller and Graham Shantz have been strong team leaders over the past few years.

Lack of depth hurt women's track this spring; the eight women stressed individual efforts to pull out a successful season in the eyes of coach Sue Roth. School records were broken in the 1600 and 3200 relays; Cheryl Henze and Julie Reimer captured 10,000 meters and two-mile records, respectively. With only two returning from last year's squad, most of the team members participated in college-level track for the first time.

Men's track coach Ed Gore attributes his team's successful season to a larger turnout than in previous years, which gave the team "a greater depth in more areas." Four team members received all-conference honors following the MCC meet in mid-May: Mike Gingrich in the high jump and 400 meters; Niels Lichti in the 300 and 400 hurdles; Eric Christner in the 110 high hurdles; and Mark Plank in the 5000 meters. The rest of the team contributed to make the season "one of the most productive in the past five years," according to coach Gore.

PEOPLE

Sara K. Hartzler 1939-1982

Sara Hartzler: colleague, teacher, counselor, artist, role model, professor, mother, daughter, sister, spouse, preacher, scholar and friend. To all of these vocations and avocations Sara brought magnificent wit, encompassing faith, and love that embraced everyone but the pompous and the proud.

She was a person who took as much pleasure in the success of a first-year student as in the poetic conceits of George Herbert. She derived as much joy from a hemstitched tablecloth as from a well-turned phrase, and her delight was equally great in the apt Scripture reference and the right word for a parody. She did not suffer fools gladly, and was capable of reducing the pretentious to sputtering incoherence.

Excellence, fullness of presence, and class made of Sara's goodness an extraordinary gift. She felt deeply, but avoided sentiment like a cockroach. She gave fully but understood those who could or for the moment would not give. She never demanded of others that which she was not prepared to offer herself, pressed down and running over.

Sara K. was a great lady; and incomparable and dedicated teacher; a matchless Victorian, wife and mother. She would be the last to say so; but then, we have disagreed about many things, and I expect, some day, that she will insist on contradicting me. I look forward to that day with glee.

Alta Hertzler was an accomplished fiber artist. She understood well the complexities of the interactions of the elements composing the warp and woof. In a similar way, her personal gifts became important strands in the fabric of life in the college community.

A strong commitment to the values of simplicity and integrity guided her choices in life. Quality was to be revered over quantity. Whether it was food, clothing, or furnishings, she savored simple beauty.

Alta was idealistic and had high expectations for herself and others. Whether as a result of her own shortcomings or those of others, she felt disappointment within herself when the ideal was not achieved. On the other hand, she readily expressed her elation with her own accomplishments or those of her family, students and friends.

Alta was a beautiful person. In her art, she expressed the grace, dignity, honesty, and integrity which was characteristic of her life.

Artificiality had no place in her vocabulary or the environments she created. The authenticity she brought to all of life's experiences was deeply rooted in a strong Christian faith. The motif of the cross appeared in many of her works — symbolically drawing the viewer into the experience of light, salvation, forgiveness, or joy.

Alta Hertzler 1937-1982

Visiting Chinese scholars

On railing: Ma Xue-je, Zhao Hou-xian, Ding Yong-shu, Ma Du-quan. Standing: Zhang Wei-ming, Chen Ke-li, Tan Ping-de, Li Zhang-qiu, She Wan-cheng, Zou Bi-cheng

1983 marked the third year of educational exchange between Goshen College and the People's Republic of China, which continued in spite of breaking off of cultural and athletic exchanges between the U.S. and China in April. This year's group included nine English teachers from various provinces, who studied American language, literature and culture, and one professor, Ma Du-quan (seated, right), who taught Chinese during his stay.

Six of the Chinese lived in Kenwood House with GC students; Professor Ma and two others lived at Ninth Street House. Ding

Yong-shu, the female member of the group, lived with Professor of Music Mary Oyer. While in the U.S. the Chinese traveled to major cities in the Northeast and spent time with area host families.
